Origin of the Project

I began listening to No Agenda toward the beginning of 2013 on the recommendation of a now-man-overboard coworker. This was in the days of the FBI Six-Week Cycle, out-of-control TSA shenanigans, and Constitution-hating Democrat gun-grabbers crawling out of the woodwork in the aftermath of Sandy Hook.

I was inspired in 2014, at the mention of – on Show 518, I believe – summaries of the very earliest shows by KD “Bubba” Martin, to consider doing my own series of transcripts as a way of exploring the history of No Agenda. An early pilot project convinced that such task would be insurmountable via solo effort, after three hours of work on Show 10. So I decided to shoot for a bronze medal instead.

This project aims to be a resource that at least partially answers the questions “when did John and Adam play that funny clip about [insert topic here]?”, and “how did that funny [insert meme here] thing get started?” I’m not really here to give you the punch line, I’m here to tickle your memory. In simplest terms: this is not a substitute for The Real Thing.

Suggestions and corrections will of course be welcomed. I often fail to get the timestamp for the opening one-liner, so anyone who can cough one of those up will be heartily congratulated.
